

ALLIED POWERS IN ACCORD ON ITALIAN CRISIS

The War
Today...By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst(In the tempo-ary absence of

is written today by J. M. Roberts, Jr.)

ALLIED planes are over the Italian fleet almost every day.
This is no revelation of a military secret, it's just something that is bound to be true. But no bombs are dropped. Why?

Outside of a flurry at La Spezia, Italy's important naval bases have gone remarkably quiet recently.
It may be only that our bombers
have had more urgent work to do elsewhere.

But there may be another answer.

There has been the suggestion that the pendulum in Italy might even swing so far as to bring her into the war on our side. Don't laugh. Stranger things have happened to people on the back-swing.

But the effect, not the action,
would be the main thing, and as things now stand something would have to happen to the Italian taste
for war if she were to prove anything but a liability.

But ships that have been maintained, that will run, and shoot—
they never are a liability to the side which has them. Mussolini preserved a "fleet in being" for just
the kind of rainy day that now has settled down over Italy. He wanted
it to bargain with.

Now there is to be no bargaining, and the Allies could use those ships. Not for our battle line, which would require extensive crew-training
and refitting, but as auxiliaries
which, in the present phase of sea war, are almost as important.

If Italy is occupied, her shipyards and factories would be available for maintenance and supply
of our fleet.

Reports that the Germans are pressing for movement of the Italian ships to Toulon and Marseille
may be true. The Germans can press. Messrs. Tedder, Doolittle and Spaatz will see to it they don't move. In the meantime, why destroy something that isn't bothering us, and may come in handy
later?

MAJOR STABS
AT JAPS SEENGrowing Allied Might In Pacific Hints of Impending Offensive

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 31.—The growing might of Allied arms in the Pacific is being readied for a series of great offensive thrusts
against Japan as soon as the present
preparatory strategy has set the stage.

This was the understanding here
today following an indication by Navy Secretary Knox that the present "island-to-base" strategy
probably will be scrapped in the
not-too-distant future.

In response to questions at a press conference, the navy chief agreed that Allied strategy soon
might call for major stabs at vital strong points in Japan's island empire system. Such points could include the naval base of Truk in the South Pacific, enemy air and naval bases in the Philippines and various defense outposts in the islands north of Japan, with the fall of which the very heart of the enemy would be exposed to assault and destruction.

Knox made it clear that the purpose of the current island-hopping
campaigns are to furnish jumping-
off places for crippling attacks.

Linked With Chinese Drive
These future assaults undoubtedly will be correlated with operations
in China against Japan's western flank. President Roosevelt said in his radio speech earlier this week that the enemy would be attacked from all corners of the compass.

Knox said it is "our estimate"
that the enemy has already suffered such shipping losses that he faces extreme difficulty keeping his ocean supply lines functioning.

Thus, the conquest of the Philippines, which many authorities think is the ultimate objective of General Douglas MacArthur's vast drive
in the southwest Pacific, would isolate the conquered territory
south of those American islands.

Somehow, similarly, American conquest of Kiska island would complete the domination of the whole strategic area of the north Pacific where the Japanese have valuable fishing grounds. In addition, it would place the United States forces in position to strike
at enemy bases almost a thousand miles away in the Kurile islands lying between Japan and Russia's Kamchatka peninsula.

NEW YORKER BUYS
NBC BLUE NETWORK
(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, July 31.—Edward J.
Noble, New York businessman and former under secretary of commerce, has purchased the Blue Network Company, Inc., nation-wide radio station chain, for $8,000,000
cash.

Announcement of the sale agreement was made last yesterday by David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America which owned the hook-up.
A statement from RCA said the sale came "a year and a half after the 'blue' was organized as a separate coast-to-coast network and in conformity with the new regulations of the FCC relating to ownership of more than one network by a single organization. RCA remains owner of National Broadcast company which will continue to operate the 'Red' network."

Nelson Asks
For Better
War Output

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 31.—Conceding there are many "psychological and physical" obstacles to be overcome, War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson today ordered a new drive to lift the output of American war plants by 30 per cent for the rest of the year.

In the 12th of a series of monthly reports, Nelson noted that June production gained somewhat over
May, but still failed to meet scheduled requirements, which are rising steadily.

"America is now in the stratosphere of production, and to reach higher altitudes requires super-
charging," he said, adding:
"In order to obtain additional increases at this stage...such obstacles to increased production as absenteeism, strikes, delays by management in utilizing full capacity, over-optimism which reduces working energies—such obstacles as these must be vigorously attacked
with every instrument at our disposal."

"Plans have been matured and are now being put into effect to drive production up against the psychological and physical difficulties which stand in the way."
At the end of June, 43 per cent
of 1943's scheduled munitions requirements had been produced. But Nelson declared that if goals for the remainder of the year are to be met, the average monthly production must be 30 per cent higher than the average output during the first six months.

Production got off to a poor start in 1943, with January output 7 per cent below December, 1942. However, gains ranging from 9 down to 2 per cent over the previous month
were recorded from February on,
with the exception of May, which was on a level with April.

Lisbon Couple Hurt When Machine Goes Over Bank

Francis Hassler, 21, and his sister,
Miss Gladys Hassler, 25, of R.
D. 1, Lisbon, suffered minor injuries when he lost control of their car on Route 164, one and a half miles south of Lisbon at 6:45 p. m.
yesterday. The car went over an embankment, striking a fence and
a tree, highway patrolmen reported.

The couple was admitted to Salem City hospital, where Hassler
was treated for lacerations and abrasions of the face, knees and arms. Miss Hassler received an abrasion of the elbow, forehead and hand.

RENEW NAVAL ASSAULTS ON
SICILY COASTPowerhouse Drives of Allies Crush Axis Defenses On Land

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 31.—A powerhouse drive of Allied armies
crushed more Axis defense salients, Allied headquarters announced today, as American and British naval forces drew a tight noose about the northeastern tip of Sicily and war-
planes laid down a heavy offensive against mainland air defenses.

Both the British Eighth army,
which long had been held at a standstill before Catania on the east coast, and the American Seventh army driving in from the west scored substantial gains. Gen.
Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters announced.

Callant American torpedo patrol
boats, announced in action in Sicilian waters for the first time,
swarmed like angry wasps off the north coast and even 50 miles up
the coast of the Italian mainland,
striking repeatedly at enemy supply vessels, sinking at least three, while British naval detachments shelled
the Italian mainland and the Sicilian coast and cruised into the narrowest part of Messina strait hunting enemy ferries.

Allied warplanes again swept to the vicinity of Rome to plaster an airfield.

Axis Losses Heavy

The Americans and British in their ground advances exacted
heavy casualties among Axis troops,
and the Canadians at the central hinge also stormed forward, capturing Agira after an artillery and air
barrage which German veterans
said was worse than anything they had experienced in Russia or North Africa. (The capture of Agira was first announced in Washington by Acting Secretary of War Paterson.)

The Americans captured more than 500 Germans among nearly 1,000 new prisoners in the northern sector.

The unconditional surrender of the islands of Favignana, Levanzo
and Marettimo was reported.

The three little islands form a triangle off the west coast of Sicily, the most western being Marettimo, which is 35 miles from Allied-occupied Trapani.

American bombers returned to the suburbs of Rome to pulverize
the Pratrica Di Mare airport 11
miles south of the capital, and flying Fortresses, returning to the mainland for another of their sledgehammer blows, attacked Grottaglie airport near Taranto on the Italian heel, Allied headquarters announced.

Funds For Mahoning County
Vice Probe Are Withheld

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, July 31.—State
Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson today
accused Atty. Gen. Thomas J.
Herbert of "extravagance" in the Mahoning county (Youngstown)
vice investigation and refused to pay $4,000 in bills.
"They are extravagantly throwing away money and accomplishing small results," the auditor
said.

The investigation, launched in May, 1942, has resulted in the indictment of more than 20 persons on gambling charges, and still is in progress.

Agents of the attorney general,
under special investigation, Simon
L. Lewis of Cincinnati, have been raiding gambling houses, especially those in the "numbers" racket, and confiscating equipment and records. They also have struck at houses of prostitution.

Ferguson said his examiners
have been checking expenditures
of the attorney general's investigators both at Youngstown and Cincinnati.

He described Herbert's pay vouchers for Special Investigator Lela
as a prime example of the asserted extravagance.

Responsibility Of Private Industry In Post-War Era Readjustment Is Stressed

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, July 31.—Urging that the bulk of the burden of finding jobs for returning servicemen
be carried by private enterprise
rather than the government, Senators Burton (R-Ohio) and Radcliffe (D-Md) suggested today that President Roosevelt confer soon with business and labor leaders to plan
in detail for postwar conversion of war industry to peacetime pursuits.

Their assertions came in separate interviews after the President made public and endorsed his special postwar planning committee's recommendations that the government
sponsor a demobilization and employment program for the armed forces and war industry workers.

The senators said they believed policies should be shaped under which the government would help
private enterprise keep production lines going and thus provide the jobs returning soldiers will need.

"If you don't have the business activity that produces the jobs, it won't do a great deal of good to provide Social Security benefits," Burton declared.

"It would be a wonderful opportunity for the President now to get business and labor leaders together
for a discussion of plans for the post-war period," Radcliffe said. "A great many of these men already are in the business working for the government in the war effort and they could contribute some constructive ideas."

Federal Aid Needed
While both senators said they believed private business should carry
the major share of the post-war re-employment of service men and women, they conceded that government help would be needed.

Burton said he understood that some progress already had been made toward writing into war contracts provisions under which the government will aid in financing
reconversion of plants and machinery to civilian production.

Both men said they approved the President's program for war veterans, but asserted it did not go far enough. However, Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday that Congress
would have to work out the details
of the program recommended by the special committee he appointed a year ago to plan "post-war readjustment of civilian and military personnel."

In general, the committee's report which he made public at his press-radio Congress recommended
for members of the armed forces
three months' furlough or mustering-out pay of not more than $100
a month—but no lump-sum bonus
—plus additional unemployment insurance benefits where needed, readjustment counsel, free tuition and allowances for education and training, old-age insurance benefits for service time and opportunities to work on and buy farms.

For civilian war workers, it proposed readjustment centers with counsel on retaining for other jobs
enlarging existing employment agencies and orderly cancellation of war contracts.

In addition to feeling the program lacked detail and that private business should shoulder more of the job than the committee proposed, the two senators held that some tax revisions also would be needed.

OPA STUDIES MILK
PRICE BOOST PLEARegional Office Forwards
Producers' Request To Washington

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, July 31.—The regional Office of Price Administration today forwarded to its national officials the recommendations for milk price increases which dairymen
of five states declared would bring a greater milk supply.

Milk producers and dealers asked that the price of milk be advanced to make its production "as attractive from a profit standpoint as the production of other farm products."
They said present milk prices were so unfavorable when compared with other farm produce prices as to
"threaten a disastrous reduction in milk production."

Charles W. Holman of Washington, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers association, declared the government's present milk price policy would "bring about a gradual shortening of production each month until by December production will be five per cent less than in December, 1942."

Dr. E. C. Welch, OPA regional price executive, said the request
would be sent to national OPA officials and added that no definite policy had been set on prices or rationing of dairy products.

After stating that rationing could be avoided by "knowledge of the government and the industry pooled
through advisory committees at state or local levels," the milk dealers declared that if rationing became a reality, they would be forced to consider some constructive ideas."

RAF CONTINUES
NAZI ASSAULTSDivers Attack From Hamburg To Blast Rem-
scheid In Ruhr

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, July 31.—The Allies
rolling air offensive shifted to a new target last night when the RAF
bombers blasted Remscheid, German steel center on the edge of the Ruhr.

It was the first raid of the war
on Remscheid, which was singled out for last night's heavy assault
after Hamburg had been subjected to its seventh attack in a week
Thursday night.

The massing offensive rolled on throughout daylight today with tight-flying formations of Allied bombers being shepherded over the channel by droves of fighters.

An almost unbroken rumble of explosions and heavy gunfire reverberated throughout the morning in the Folkstone area. The whole northern French coast appeared to be in a state of eruption and at one time the Boulogne area was particularly noisy.

At the same time Mosquitos and Beaufighters attacked enemy airfields and railway targets in sweeps
over France and Holland, the Air ministry communique disclosed.

Fifteen bombers and two fighters
are missing from the night's attacks.

Remscheid is the center for the manufacture of machine and precision tools vital to German munitions production.

The specified target of the big bombers' heavy attack was the Alexanderwerk A. G. which covers 75 acres with special shops building machinery for the chemical industry and the manufacture of motor parts and small arms. There are also 25 smaller factories in the city.

DNB in a broadcast over the Berlin radio recorded by the Associated Press said that 54 Allied aircraft
were shot down in the raid on Remscheid. A "great number" of bombs were dropped on the residential area, the broadcast said.

DEVELOPMENTS
OVER WEEKEND
ARE FORESEENBritish Cabinet Meetings
Cause Flurry of Excitement In London

BY JAMES F. KING

LONDON, July 31.—The United States, Great Britain and Russia
are acting in close harmony in dealing with the Italian situation
it was learned today, and it can be presumed that any armistice
terms for Italy would carry the approval of all three powers.

This manifestation of Allied unity became known as Prime Minister Winston Churchill ordered British cabinet members and heads of the fighting services to stand
by over the weekend for any possible developments.

Other Allied governments also were being kept informed. Foreign Minister Anthony Eden summoned
their representatives into conference shortly after the early morning
sessions yesterday of the British war cabinet.

How closely the Allies were working together was indicated by the speed with which Moscow backed up President Roosevelt's warning
to neutral nations not to give refuge to Benito Mussolini or any other war criminal. From the Russian capital, too, came the disclosure that Great Britain had sent a similar warning to neutral countries.

London Is Tense

The early cabinet meeting created a wave of excitement in London
and there was a feeling that big news was about to break—either a sudden capitulation by Italy or a possible new invasion blow.

This feeling was bolstered by a Vatican City report broadcast by radio. It said that Luigi Cardinal Maglioni, Papal secretary of state,
spent yesterday in almost continuous consultation with diplomats
of countries accredited to the Holy see.

The general view in London was that Italy is as good as knocked out of the war already, and one London newspaper, the Daily Mirror, carried a banner headline saying,
"Italy May Be Out of The War Tomorrow."

As British public anger mounted over Premier Badoglio's delay in replying to the Allied peace demands, the possibility was raised
that he might be induced to step down in favor of someone willing to sue for peace on the basis of terms outlined by Gen. Dwight D.
Eisenhower in his message to the Italian people Wednesday. This, it was said, would provide an out for

LAUNCHING THE P. T. A.

Leaders of the Parent-Teacher association movement in Salem are completing the preliminary organization in readiness for the opening of the first active season. When the association council and officers of the five public school groups met this week they reported 267 charter members. This isn't a commanding number, representing an average of less than 60 to a group, but it is sufficiently strong for organization purposes.

The association should have at least a thousand members. In time it will have, if proper leadership and constructive activities prove the value of such an organization can be to parents and teachers, and to the community. Membership strength is a requisite to a successful P-T association; a small group cannot attain the influence that commands attention and gets results. But if parents realize how much they can accomplish for their schools, which means for their teachers and their children, they will not hesitate to lend their support. Support of the teachers is taken for granted; they cannot afford to stay out.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

President Roosevelt's report to America Wednesday night covered a vast territory — post-war planning, which he said it is soon to go in detail; the conduct of history's greatest war; the conduct of the American people during the war; the rehabilitation for fighting men; foreign policy; the theory of total war — just to mention the high spots.

This explains why the address sounded vague and inconclusive to almost everybody, except service men and their families, who were vitally interested in the President's announcement of a post-war program for their benefit. All other listeners were struck with a feeling they were being given generalities when what they expected was some Dutch-uncle talking about problems that imperil the prosecution of the war on the home front.

They expected more than they were given. Though conceding that Mr. Roosevelt prepared a roundup report of more than ordinary merit and helped to restore the perspective that his countrymen continually sacrifice to their narrow interests, they feel the occasion called for less rounding-up and more hard-hitting.

In this they are in disagreement with the chief executive, who denies there are any serious problems on the home front. Mr. Roosevelt points out that the fighting front and the home front cannot be separated, which is true. But he draws from this conclusion that success on the fighting front testifies to the soundness of the home front, which is of doubtful truth.

Many of his countrymen — including some inside his administration — believe that unless certain home front problems which have been threatening to get out of control are brought under control in the immediate future, the United States may have to win the war in spite of, not because of, the wartime administration of domestic policies. It solves nothing to say everything is all right when the evidence is to the contrary.

His countrymen still await reassurance that President Roosevelt can rise to the tremendous demands being made on his executive ability. He has been concentrating his attention on the war; the results testify to sound planning, painstaking execution. The results on the home front in such details as price stabilization, civilian supplies, food, transportation, labor, supply and taxation, testify to nothing but expediency.

Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt will tackle these matters later, as he says he intends to do with the details of his post-war program for service personnel. The outline offered in the meantime includes recommendations to congress for mustering-out pay, unemployment insurance if jobs can't be found, credit for time in service under social security laws, trade training, hospitalization and pensions for the disabled. Mr. Roosevelt does well to open discussion of a post-war policy for veterans of this war now; it is not too soon.

The President has confirmed the popular impression that the war is going better than the chief strategists expected it would be going at this time. He has confirmed the impression that nothing has happened to alter this government's insistence on uncompromising, unconditional surrender. He has confirmed the impression that in the prospect of victory over Germany and Japan, Italy already being counted out, the only open question is time. Victory can be gained in minimum time by maximum effort, or it can be gained in maximum time by less than maximum effort.

The people's resolution to put forth maximum effort continues strong. It is handicapped only by such interruptions and obstacles as arise from inept organization of the home front. The same oversights, blunders and conflicts, if they existed on the fighting fronts, would be disastrous. That is why the people expected the President to speak more directly than he chose to speak — why they will continue to expect something more reassuring than being told that their imaginations are to blame.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, August 1

SUNDAY'S horoscope is one of utmost importance fostering and making way for events and issues of major scope and future effect both in private and public life. Great issues may be in the balance, with influential cooperation for ways and means that might effect combinations, mergers and kindred affairs, by clever manipulation of available assets and resources. Probably intuition may be effective, or "hunches," but with concentrated, not diffused tactics.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year of extraordinary opportunities for securing fortune by clever, shrewd and strange aids or psychic intuitions. But such must be used with finesse.

A child born on this day may have exceptional talents for manipulating big deals of paramount importance through some peculiar power or aid. It may be capable and lucky as well.

For Monday, August 2

Monday's astrological forecast is for stabilizing and chrysalizing important projects already begun under exceptional promise for success. Brilliant ideas and plans may be set in motion now which require sturdy application and industry to put them on a sound and enduring basis. Elders and superiors may be substantially cooperative and strange contacts also may assist.

Those whose birthday it is should devote their most stable and sturdy efforts to putting on a firm and enduring basis, of programs already begun. Some sort of windfall seems to be involved, and requires prudent development for making it enduring, safe and secure. Serious thought and diligence are urged for permanency.

A child born on this day may be serious, prudent, painstaking, with system and detail to attract firm friends and supporters. It should also enjoy its share of good will and good luck.

That great man, New York City's mayor, keeps howling and wailing about "famine" in that city. We've been wondering if he knows how many who go to bed hungry, if any?

According to an advertisement, carried twenty-five years ago, dealers were advertising tires that were guaranteed to do 3,500 miles. Lots of motorists would be glad to get some of that kind today.

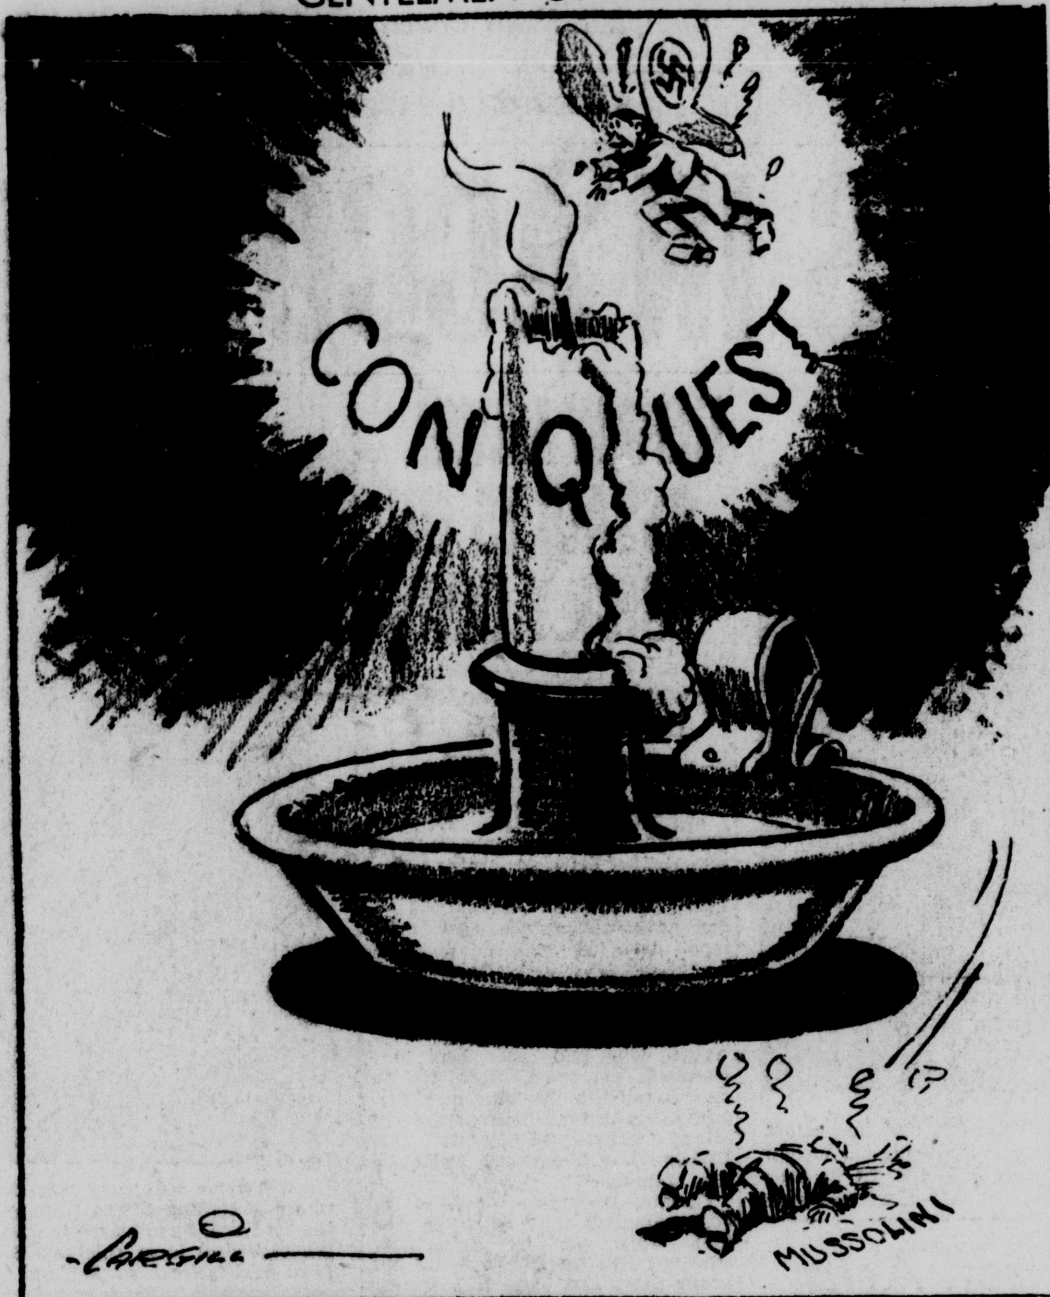

Another thing we note is that the European rumor factories are not limiting their production to a forty-hour week.

One World has been sold to the movies where the usual custom of dealing in superlatives may cause it to be issued as One Universe!

These are days in which there is much evidence of political fences being repaired as a government project.

News from the fighting fronts indicate that one of the hardest things to hold is a stronghold.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Some Varieties of Neuralgia

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE FACE is supplied with two nerves. One is mainly motor, that is, it controls the movements of muscles; the other is mainly sensory, that is, it carries sensa-

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

tions of touch, temperature and pain from the skin and other surface structures (for instance, the eye, the teeth and the inside of the nose).

These two nerves are all mixed up and tangled with each other. If the facial nerve would just supply muscles alone, and the trigeminal nerve just bring sensations from the skin of the face alone, it would not be so confusing. But the facial nerve has a sensory branch which supplies the skin over the ear. And the trigeminal nerve has a motor branch which supplies the muscles of mastication. And they both interchange fibers with each other through ganglia, which has always been the despair of the first-year medical student.

Commonest Form of Spasm
So the subject of facial neuralgia is mixed up at the source, and when anyone asks, "What is the cause of my facial neuralgia?" the doctor immediately wants to know, "What kind of facial neuralgia have you got?"

The commonest kind is, of course, what the French called very aptly tic douloureux — painful spasm. It affects one of the branches of the trigeminal nerve — either the one that goes to the forehead, and eyelid, or the one that goes to the skin over the upper jaw and the upper teeth, or the one that goes to the skin over the lower jaw and the lower teeth. It is undoubtedly one of the most excruciatingly painful affections on earth. It comes on in paroxysms which are like terrific electric shocks. It affects older people almost exclusively — it is rare below the age of 40.

Under treatment one of the most important things to remember is a don't. Don't get your teeth pulled out. The pain is in the teeth and it seems natural that if they were gone, the pain would go. But it is not so. Even if the teeth are infected or carious and need to come out, this removal will not help the pain or tri-facial neuralgia.

Another form of facial neuralgia is caused by affection of another set of nerves — the ones that arise from the sphenopalatine ganglion inside the nose and result in what is known as Sluder's neuralgia, named after the late Dr. Greenfield Sluder, of St. Louis, or lower half headache, because the pain and ache is in the nose and lower half of the face, sometimes going to the skin of the neck and shoulders.

Associated With Sinus

It is nearly always associated with sinus disease of the nose and clearing this up, or relieving the drainage clears up the neuralgia, although in some cases the pain may be so excruciating that the ganglion itself has to be removed. In the treatment of severe facial neuralgia, inhalation of trichloroethylene often gives relief and the sufferer should remember that the modern neurosurgeon can do wonders in the most stubborn of these cases.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. W. — I would like to know your opinion of the quantity of milk an adult should drink a day.

Answer: Milk is a good drink for infants and not to such a degree, however, for children. There is no health reason why a person over the age of 15 should drink milk at all. I have not drunk a glass for 35 years. Man is the only animal which habitually chooses to drink milk after the period of lactation has ceased. A cat drinks milk only when it is hungry. A. J. Carlson, the famous physiologist, says every element in milk can be obtained, better fitted for an adult, in other foods. Dr. Horace Soper, of St. Louis, says raw milk is unfit for human consumption.

R. T. — I am a boy 17 years old and am only five feet seven inches tall. I have always admired taller persons. What is the chance of growing after 17 years?

Answer: Practically no chance. Five feet seven is not short. You might as well get used to it.

E. F. M. — Is it dangerous for young children to go to the home of an old person whom the doctor says has tuberculosis, but has built up an immunity? She says she hasn't it and is careless around children.

Answer: I answer this question about once a week, but will do so again. About the most dangerous thing that can happen to a child is to be in contact with an older person who has tuberculosis. Tuberculosis is caught in childhood, and at no time later. It is caught from an older person. There is no danger in a person over twenty being around an older person with tuberculosis. Many older people either don't know they have tuberculosis or can't be convinced of it, but they are plague spots just the same.

T. Y. — What does a positive reaction mean? Does it mean the person already has tuberculosis? Is there any danger staying with the person?

Answer: A positive tuberculin reaction means the person at one time has had tuberculosis infection. How bad it is is not implied by saying the reaction is positive. Fifty per cent of people over the age of twenty have a positive. It calls for further investigation with the X-ray.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Sergeants Preferred!

KEARNS FIELD, Utah — It seems the sergeants are the marrying kind. A check made at this Army Air Forces basic training center showed that in one month 24 officers and men were married to Utah girls. Of these 15 were sergeants.

Half of U. S. Public Illiterate, Claims College Professor

(By United Press)

CHICAGO—American people are more than 50 per cent illiterate in their effective ability to understand adult reading matter, William S. Gray, professor of education at the University's sixth annual conference on reading.

"Millions of adults today have attended school for only a limited period of time and therefore did not have an opportunity to learn to read well," he said.

"What happened to them is matched in the experience of hundreds of us who took French or German in high school or college. Whatever utility we acquired to read these languages soon disintegrated through disuse."

At least half the population is unable to read any printed material above the seventh grade level, Gray said.

Gray said that Army officials have complained of the high percentage of men inducted who not only were unable to do the reading required in learning certain military skills, but were even unable to read simple instructions accurately.

Speakers at the conference urged immediate revamping of school reading material to include "fresh, timely information, true of conditions this year, this month, this week."

"No set of references compiled 10 years ago, or even two, will meet this need, nor will material whose goal is projected 10 years ahead," the conference was told.

"The time is the present and materials must match."

The phrase "his name is mud" originated from the misfortunes of Dr. Samuel A. Mudd, convicted of complicity in the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, and sentenced to imprisonment at Fort Jefferson in the Florida Keys.

BONDS OVER AMERICA

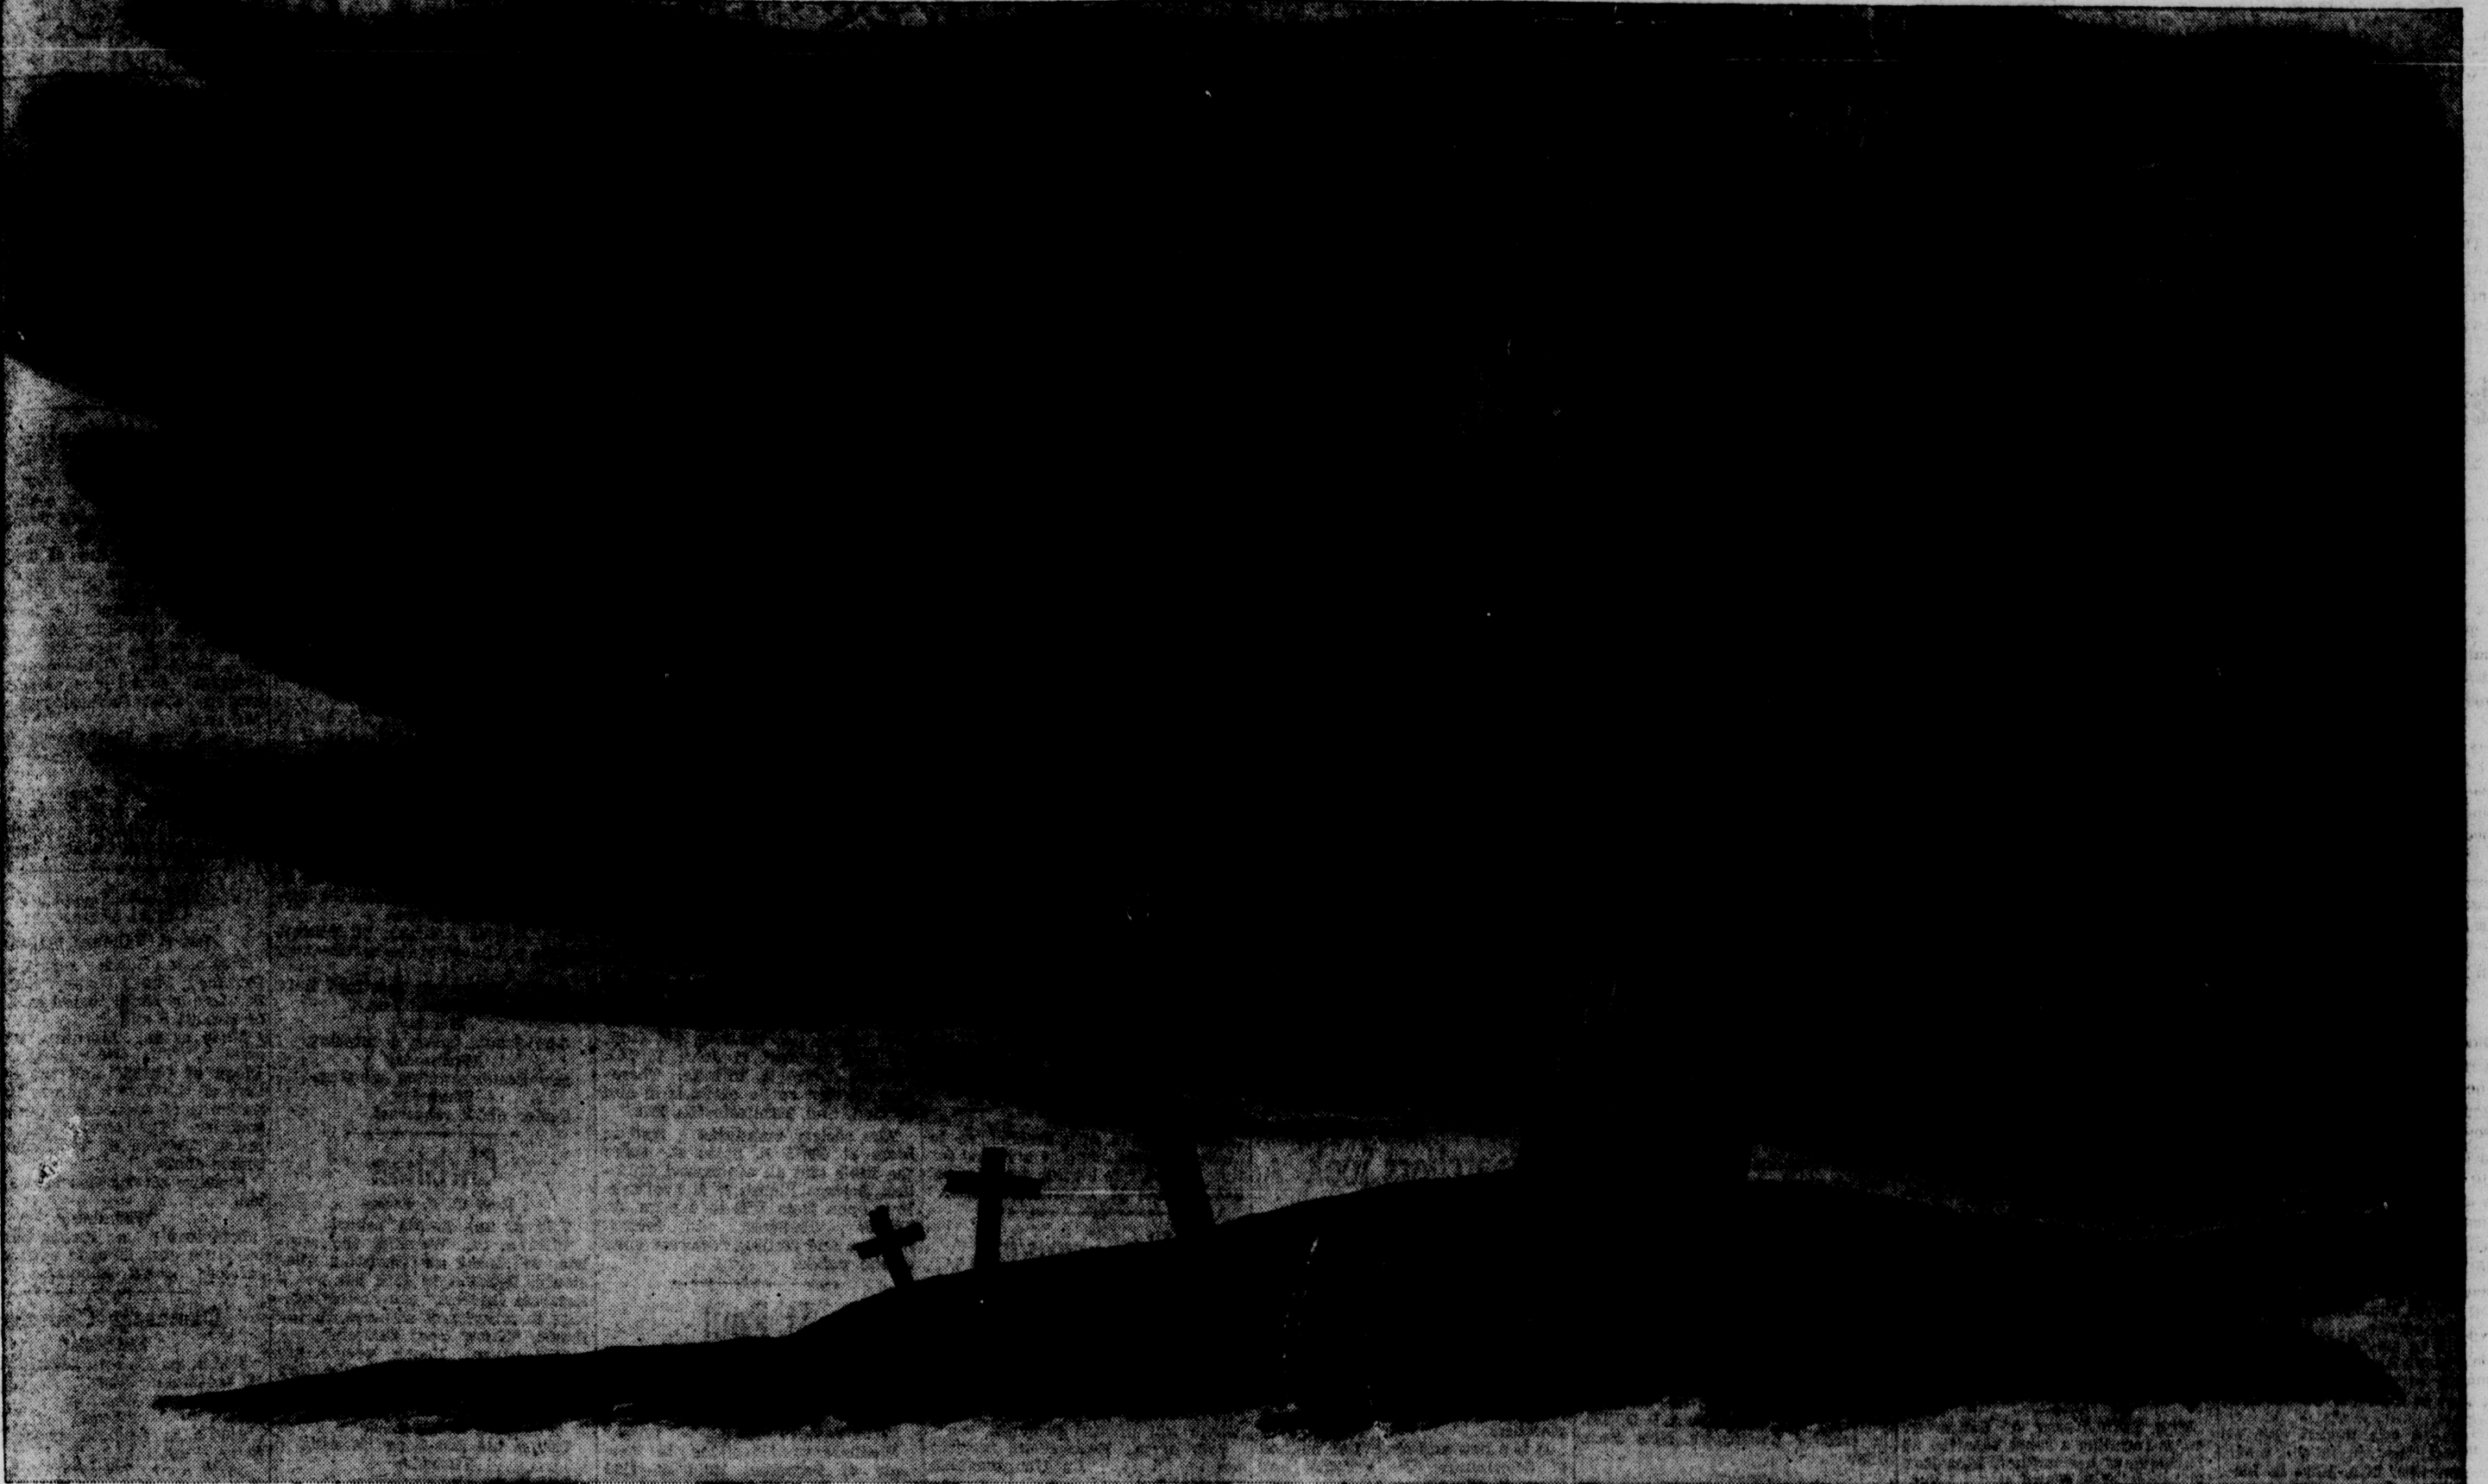

New York's Columbus Circle

Public address systems have been detracted from the interest in "soap-boxers," who crowded Columbus Circle, but free speech still is the privilege of all American citizens.

Speak Up Buy War Bonds

Under the Swastika and the Rising Sun, there is not even the semblance of free speech and some are sent to their doom because of "thoughts not in harmony with the public good."

"The flowers are for yesterday and the monuments for tomorrow"

"I'd like to tell you what the Japs did to some friends of mine"

"I AM LIEUTENANT (j. g.) ANN B. BERNATITUS, U. S. N.—a nurse, back from Bataan. I have a message for you . . .

"Those American boys—who fought for you with their backs to the wall, waiting for help that never reached them—came from the land of plenty. But when their lives were at stake, all they had was . . . plenty of nothing!"

"They were outnumbered, outgunned, and out-supplied. They were so short of ammunition that antiaircraft gunners often had to hold their fire until the enemy planes were on top of them. They were so short of bandages and gauze that we nurses had to wash out the old ones and use them again.

"But they were never short of courage. They never spoke of surrender. They just went on fighting, and hoping, and dying. And no sacrifice was ever too great.

"Let me give you an example. One terrible day on Bataan we had 285 patients on our operating tables in 8 hours—a new patient every two minutes of the day.

"A sailor was brought in with his abdomen blown to bits. He was a goner and I think he knew it. 'Doctor,' he asked, 'is there any hope at all?'"

"The doctor wished to reassure him and replied, 'We'll do everything we can!' The sailor tried to roll over. 'Doc,' he begged, 'get me off this table and save one of those other fellows who still has a fighting chance.'

"That was the kind of men we had at Bataan. And they would want you to remember not only what they did, but what they did without.

"They would want you to remember it, but not with flowers and memorials. The flowers are for yesterday and the monuments for tomorrow."

"Remember them now—this month and every month—by buying War Bonds!

"Buy guns and planes and shells and ships and tanks—for those other countrymen of yours who are fighting so far from home. See to it that never again, any place in the world, will American fighting men be caught short as they were on Bataan! That never again will American wounded perish for the help your dollars might have sent!

"Certainly taxes are higher. Certainly the cost of living has gone up. But the men on Bataan were never ten-percenters!

"They gave everything they had. And now it's up to you to buy War Bonds not only if you can, but all you can! Please believe me, folks—that's the way the boys on Bataan would like to be remembered!"

came necessary the same committee could "make such a program effective in each local market."

Salem Man Speaks

Holman asserted that neither the OPA, the War Food administration nor the Department of Agriculture would be ready to act on prices "until the question of subsidies is settled by Congress in September."

Dairymen from Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia attended the meeting, sponsored by the Ohio Milk Producers' association.

J. J. Shafer of Akron, chairman of the conference, said the group discussed the necessity of raising the producer-income "not only to increase production but to maintain present production."

Henry W. Ingersoll, secretary of Cleveland's Associated Milk Dealers, told the conferees the Cleveland market was threatened with a shortage of 1,500 to 2,000 cans of milk daily for the last four months of the year unless a marked production increase is achieved.

"I'm afraid that there isn't any production schedule that can relieve this situation," he added.

Ora Anderson of Salem, secretary of the Ohio Milk Producers' federation, which arranged the five-state meeting, said the officials would be asked to declare the government's stand on price regulations, subsidy payments and rationing.

Shafer said the dealers and producers had expressed opposition to general rationing of milk, but agreed that such control might be necessary in specific shortage areas.

Researchers Seek Nutritional Plan Helpful to Humans

(By Associated Press) PALO ALTO, Calif.—A scientific test procedure which may help counteract the nutritional effects of the meat shortage was reported today by Stanford university researchers.

It is a new and simplified method of determining the varieties and amounts of amino acids — compounds which constitute proteins. There are at least 23 of these compounds and they are the basic components of all living things, plant and animal.

For proper nutrition, humans have to get about 10 of these amino acids ready-made. They cannot, like plants, make their own.

Meat, milk, cheese and eggs are the main sources of these ready-made substances.

Ordinary vegetables also contain proteins but as yet diet experts do not know exactly which plants and how much of each a person should have in order to get all the amino acids he needs.

Up to now the job of analyzing food substances for their kinds and quantities of amino acids has involved long, complicated chemical processes which only experts could perform.

But four Stanford biochemists today disclosed they were working out a short cut to the answers. The experimenters, Dr. G. W. Beadle, Dr. E. L. Tatum, Dr. N. H. Horowitz and Dr. D. M. Bonner, are breeding microscopic organisms which act as amino acids indicators.

The parent organism is a variety of ordinary bread mold. They found one strain of this mold which would not grow unless vitamin B-1 was added to its otherwise regular food.

And certain other new strains refused to grow without a particular kind of amino acid in their diet—a different one for each strain.

By feeding test substance to these strains and measuring their growth the experimenters can tell what kind and how much of an amino acid the food contains.

They're seeking test molds for all 10 ready-made amino acids that humans need—and further experimenting they hope may show how these 10 may be obtained from sources other than meat.

The farther the earth moves from the sun, the slower it travels.

BREAD FOR EVERY DAY

"Some folks—especially the ones who really need it most—condescendingly say, No need of my going to church services. I know everything the minister preaches about. What arrogance and pride. Surely such conceited religionists ought to be asked to step into the pulpit and impart their wisdom to us lesser mortals."

"It is still possible to impart knowledge to important world-wide folks. Here is something to think about: 'I know how bread tastes, but I eat it every day. And what is more I like it and it nourishes me.'—Rev. Bauman.

AMERICAN BRED by FRANKEN MELONEY

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE
 "Yes, Hans?" saluted Wain.
 Hans looked worried. It's the Baron, Mr. Wain. I don't like the way he's acting."
 A swift change came over Wain's face. "What's wrong with him?"
 "I don't know, Mr. Wain. He wasn't good all day, but I didn't think he was anything serious because he wasn't running any temperature. I thought maybe he was just tired. But now, all of a sudden, he's very weak."
 "I'll go with you," Ann offered.
 "If I may," she amended.
 The Baron wasn't in the kennels; he was bedded down in one of the horse stalls. He raised his head just as they came in, but when he recognized Christopher, he got to his feet and came toward him. Ann felt as if she were in the presence of royalty. The dog had majesty, and sick though he was, he reared his proud head and tried to stand.
 Christopher knelt before him. "What's bothering you, old fellow?"
 Ann felt a lump come into her throat. The Baron wasn't just another dog; he wasn't merely a great stud and the head of Christopher Wain's kennels. The same relationship existed between him and his master as existed between her and Rowdy. It was a relationship that filled some gap that life hadn't filled.
 "Call the vet, Hans," Christopher ordered. "And let's get him into the tack-room where it's warm."
 The Baron couldn't make the distance down the alleyway behind the stalls, and Christopher picked up his two hundred pounds and carried him. He placed him on the couch.
 "Didn't I hear you say something about Paul Freund being on his way here?" he asked Ann.
 "Yes. His mother said he'd just left."
 "Good! Freund knows more about dogs than any vet alive."
 He busied himself lighting the stove while the Baron seemed to doze off into restless sleep.
 "He's a pretty sick pup," Christopher vouchsafed shortly.
 Ann made no reply. She was thinking the same thing. It occurred to her that she ought to be on her way—she'd promised to be ready to dine with Tom at seven-thirty—but somehow it didn't seem as if she could leave without knowing what was wrong. She glanced at her watch. There was time.
 Paul Freund arrived before the veterinarian came. His round face felt when he seated himself beside the great body of the dog. The Baron's ears twitched. He opened his eyes for an instant and then closed them again.
 "Have you any idea what it can be?" Christopher asked.
 "Heart," said Paul briefly.
 "That's what I was afraid of. Is there anything we can do?"
 "Sure." His voice was falsely cheerful. The vet'll give him a shot of digitalis. That'll pull him out of it." Christopher rose. "I'll tell Hans to get some down at the drugist's in case Dr. Perry hasn't any with him."
 "That's a good idea," said Paul. When they were alone, Ann said, "You don't really think the digitalis will help, do you?"
 Paul shook his head. "I wouldn't want to tell Wain, though; he's nuts about this dog, and I'm afraid the poor devil's done for. I saw this happen twice in my life. It's tough."
 "How long?" Ann's lips moved woodenly.
 Paul shrugged. "Hours, days. No telling. No, I'd like to stay, but Carol's in the car. She enjoys the ride. I just came over to ask Wain if I could get the job of cropping the ears of his new litter but I can't bother him about it now."
 "I didn't know you cropped ears." "I don't. Except my own pups. But gosh, I got a family to feed now! And Carol's not been so hot since the baby was born. I'd like to get her away for a week or two Atlantic City, maybe."
 "I'm so sorry."
 "Great set-up you got here," he depressed, and grinned a little. "Things have a funny way of working out, all right. You meet Wain and almost run him off my place, and then rent him your place. Well, anyway, it's great having you two in my neck of the woods, raising Danes. Maybe we can go places!"
 Ann wanted to tell him that he was on the wrong track, that she and Christopher Wain were two different and widely separated entities. But there was no time for explanations, for Christopher came back with the veterinarian in tow. After a time, Paul took his leave, and the veterinarian closed his black bag and went away too, leaving a flat envelope filled with heavy pink pills. He was a little man with a big head and horn-rimmed glasses, and ugly hands.
 "I'll be around in the morning," he said.
 Mrs. Johnson sent two trays to the tack-room—crisp broilers and rice and string beans. Christopher tried to tempt the Baron with some of the white meat but he turned his head away. Christopher didn't eat either—just coffee, strong and hot. "What's the matter? You ought to eat," he frowned at Ann.
 "I ought to go home," Ann said, without moving. She thought vaguely of her appointment with Tom but it didn't seem to matter. Tom seemed far away. Everything seemed far away. She pulled her top-coat closer. The coat was warm but it didn't keep the chill out. She shivered, and the pain in her chest drove through her body.
 "It's too late for you to even think of driving back tonight," said Christopher firmly. "You sleep in your old room, and I'll use the guest cottage."

One part of her wanted to take violent issue with him, but another part of her—the feverish, aching part of her relaxed against the luxury of having someone tell her what to do.
 "Too bad you never saw the Baron in the ring," Christopher said after a long silence. "No judge ever put him down. But it wasn't only his show record; there was some other quality he had. I've seen snarling, mean dogs come up to him, and he'd scarcely lower his head to them, but their tails would drop between their legs and they'd slink away. He had a quality of spirit that dwarfed even his physical power."
 He's talking as if the Baron were already gone, Ann thought. She shook herself a little dizzily. The room was hot and made her head feel heavy.
 "I wouldn't be alive today if it weren't for the Baron," Christopher's voice went on. "There was a stable on the Westchester place that caught fire. I was nearest at hand and I went in to get a horse out. A beam fell and knocked me unconscious. When I came to, I was in the paddock. The Baron had gone into that fire and pulled me out."
 "I thought all animals were afraid of fire," Ann said.
 "They are," said Christopher. "There was a stir on the couch. The Baron raised his head. The glow from the stove played across it like a halo. Slowly, he started to rise from the blankets which swathed him. Ann moved as if to stop him, but Christopher held her back. "Let him alone," he said in a low voice.
 The Baron sprang from the couch and stood staring intently into the dark corner of the room. Ann followed his gaze, but saw nothing.
 The Baron raised his head and barked, but it was such a bark as she had never heard; it was an explosion of deep bass sound like the challenge of a Norse hero meeting Wierd, the captain of his fate. And then he slumped and fell.
 Ann looked up into Christopher's face. She could see his mouth work against the stricture of grief in his throat.
 From the kennels a long low wail broke forth. Hans paddled to the door in slippers and bathrobe. "What is it?" he cried. "All the dogs are barking and I thought I heard the Baron's bark."
 "The Baron has gone on to wherever great hearts go," Christopher gently laid a hand on the man's shoulder. "See to him."
 In the darkness of the passage-way, Ann stumbled giddily. Christopher caught her. Her hands cupped her face. For an instant, she thought he was going to kiss her. "Poor child!" he murmured. "You've got a chill; you're burning with fever." She felt herself being swooped into his arms.
 "Put me down! Where are you taking me?"
 "Be quiet. Never mind where I'm taking you."
 Freeing a hand, he pulled her coat closer about her. The wind was blowing, and it cut through her like a knife's edge. He quickened his pace. She saw that he was heading north for the car but for the house.
 "I won't stay here!" she protested vehemently. "I'm going back to New York. If I'm going to be sick—"
 "You're not going to be sick, you are sick. And you're being taken exactly where you belong."
 Ann closed her eyes. It was hard to tell whether it was moments or hours later when she opened them; time had lost reality. She was on the bed in her own room. For an instant she thought she was alone but he was still with her, kneeling before the hearth lighting the fire.
 "Are you well enough to undress yourself?" he asked without turning.
 She sat up, and swung her legs to the floor. "Look here, Mr. Christopher Wain, I've stood just about enough of your masculine efficiency."

"You're being obstinate," he told her brusquely. "Now please get under those covers. I'll give you ten minutes to do so. In the meantime, I'm going to phone the doctor, get some hot water bags, and call in Emma Jeeves."
 She could hear him clumping about in the hall; then a hand reached through her door and a pair of pajamas came sailing across the room to fall on the bed beside her.
 Ann could hardly manage donning them. It took all the focussing of her will to lift her arms through the jacket sleeves. She was shivering with exhaustion by the time he returned.
 "Couldn't find any hot water bags," Christopher explained, pretending not to notice that her teeth were chattering. He unburdened himself of three corked bottles, and put a steaming drink on the table beside her. "These go down to your feet," he told her as he slipped the bottles under the covers. "And this goes inside of you." He held the glass to her lips.
 Ann felt as if she were in a swing making great swoops out into nowhere. She clutched at his hand, and it clasped firmly about hers. A heavy blanket of oblivion seemed to be drawn over her, until nothing existed save the hand she held to; and then even that became indistinct, a sensation felt through numbed fingers.

Canton Man Helps Airplanes Fly Higher

Martin Fleischmann, German aviator in World War I, is the inventor of a new special steel which enables United Nations airplanes to fly above effective anti-aircraft fire. Upper right shows Fleischmann as he looks today.

Invents New Steel To Boost Ceilings Of Allied Planes

CANTON—Forty-six year old, German World War I veteran Martin Fleischmann stood quietly in the background here today watching a huge press forging red-hot steel ingots into the proper shape at the Timken Roller Bearing Co.'s plant. The steel looked like any other chunk of steel — innocent enough—but it is giving German military strategists, their air force fliers, and anti-aircraft gunners a headache. For a few pounds of it used in a vital part of a turbo-supercharger enable our bombers and fighters to fly at altitudes above the effective range of anti-aircraft fire.

Paradoxically, the German air force in the last war provided the inspiration and is therefore partly responsible for the development of this steel. For 26 years ago Martin Fleischmann volunteered for training in the German air corps and served as pilot for observation flights in France. The observation planes that Fleischmann piloted depended upon altitude for safety. They flew at 18,000 feet which was then far above French, British and American anti-aircraft fire.

Safe At High Altitudes
 Allied pursuit planes didn't reach that altitude until well toward the end of the war. Thus, young Fleischmann, in comparative safety, got a birdseye view of the last war. He never forgot the inherent advantages of high altitude flying.

Because of his interest in high altitude flying, and airplane engine design, he entered the University of Munich after the war to study mechanical engineering. Metallurgy, the study of the structure of metals, was a relatively new science then and it fascinated Fleischmann. He decided to specialize in it and after graduation remained at the university as assistant professor of metallurgy.

Mortality Rate At Navy's Base Hospital Miraculous

By FRANCES MCCARTHY
 United Press Correspondent

ADVANCED U. S. NAVAL BASE SOUTH PACIFIC — Sulfa drugs, plasma, full and immediate benefits of measures taken "in the field" and aerial ambulance service have contributed largely to the excellence of results obtained in the treatment of war wounds at U. S. Naval Base Hospital No. 2, according to medical officers here.

Free and generous acknowledgment of the important role these factors have played in the building of the reputation of "No. 2" and high tribute to the expert and conscientious personnel, is voiced by Capt. John E. Porter (MC), USN, commanding officer of the hospital, whose gross mortality rate of but 0.32 per cent over the first 12 months of its existence is in itself, in the opinion of the layman, in the category of the "near-miraculous."

Most cases of war wounds are from 12 to 72 hours old on arrival at the airfield adjacent to "No. 2," located "somewhere in the South Pacific." Further transfer to the hospital, a distance of some three miles, is made by ambulance. A "Quonset Hut" stands adjacent to the landing strip at the airfield for the reception of patients during not-unusual tropical rainstorms. A naval medical officer and hospital corpsman are on additional duty at the airfield and supervise the transfer of patients from airliner to ambulance.

Cites Success With Burns

air transport in contributing to small mortality figures.

Perusal of case histories of burns treated at "No. 2" unearth a mortality rate of but 2 per cent, this despite the fact that all degrees of burns have been seen there, and all extents, from a mere 1 per cent to 90 per cent of the body area.

Because of the early use of blood plasma and sulfa drugs, prompt and excellent "first-aid" treatment and, last but not least, swiftness of transportation, it has remained for the base hospital in the majority of cases only to launch the case on its ultimate and definite treatment, according to Commander Owen.

Commander Owen, aided by Lieut. Comdr. Jerome I. Simon (MC), USNR, of Baltimore, Md., is a noted expert on treatment of burns. Before induction into active naval service, Commanders Owen and Simon were engaged in the practice of general surgery at Portland, Ore., and St. Louis, Mo., respectively. Both have been attached to the staff of "No. 2" since its inception.

Simplest Treatment Used

Commanders Owen and Simon describe their treatment for burns as one of the simplest conceivable. It consists, briefly, of: (1) Debridement. Cleansing the burned area and removing damaged tissue, under anesthesia when necessary; (2) Application of crystalline sulfathiazole powder, which is sprayed on with an ordinary nasal atomizer; (3) Covering the area with a thin layer of tannic acid jelly; (4) Placing the affected part under a heat cradle. This step serves a two-fold purpose: It causes the tannic jelly to crust more rapidly, it provides warmth for the patient.

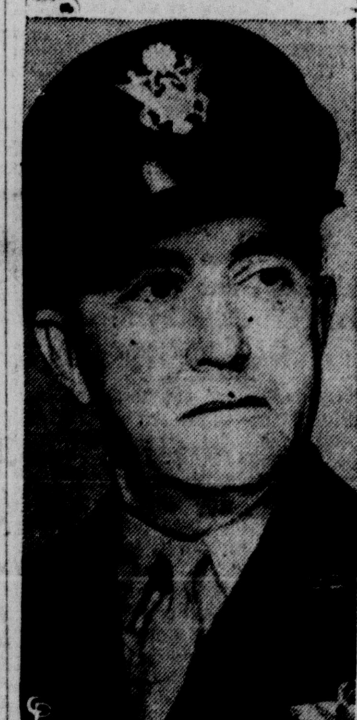

"Results with this simple regime have been so uniformly good that we have seen no reason to vary it in infected cases, which means cases that are received within 24 hours after the burn," Commanders Owen and Simon report.

In cases where secondary infection is present, they recommend: (1) Several saline baths daily with interim application of 5 per cent sulfathiazole ointment in a white petroleum base; (2) Maintenance of a state of open surgical drainage at all times.

Use of the sulfa drugs, physically or orally as the case requires, obviates the necessity for plastic surgical procedures to a degree hitherto undreamed of, doctors report.

All women in Britain between the ages of 18 and 45—more than 8,500,000—are registered for some form of national service. Those who do not voluntarily enter the auxiliary forces, the land army, nursing, civil defense or certain war industries, may be ordered into work wherever national needs require.

Air Training Chief

RESPONSIBILITY for training of all the U. S. Army Air Forces' ground and flying personnel now is in the hands of Maj. Gen. Barton K. Yount, above, who has been appointed commanding general of the new Army Air Forces Training Command. (International)

Meanwhile, German money went into a tallspin. At its lowest point one thousand billion marks were worth 25 American cents. Fleischmann became discouraged with German economy and so disgusted with German politics that he came to America in 1924. He arrived in New York City without friends to help him become established and with only $50 in his pocket.

Got Truck Driver's Job

Knowing how to speak English only well enough to mispronounce it, the former professor of science became a truck driver's helper. He jumped from one job to another, but finally found employment in his profession with a large Pittsburgh steel company.

From Pittsburgh he came to Canton in 1928 to take charge of the metallurgical laboratory of the Timken company, where he has made many contributions in the field of metallurgical research.

Three years ago American aircraft engineers realized that if a special, tough, heat-resistant steel for a vital part of the turbo-supercharger could be developed, it would add thousands of feet to American aircraft ceilings. The call for this steel went out. Fleischmann, remembering the security he enjoyed as a pilot of the German high altitude observation plane, went to work at once to provide the necessary steel.

He was successful, even beyond his fondest hopes. So successful that American airplanes now fly above effective anti-aircraft fire. The altitudes they reach are so great that German fighter planes cannot rise above American planes, now rapidly becoming equipped with superchargers made from the ex-German aviator's steel.

It is paying tremendous dividends in lives saved and planes that come back to fight again over the empires dominated by Germany and Japan.

Scotts And Goldbars Win Opening Third Round Games

BEAT STRAINS, 5-0, ELECTRIC FURNACE, 7-3, RESPECTIVELY

Friends and East End A. C. Are Winners of Class B Engagements

Scotts shut out Strains, 5 to 0, and the Gold Bars beat the Electric Furnace outfit, 7-3, in the opening third round Class A league games Friday evening at Centennial park.

Class B engagements saw the Friends climb back into the win column by drubbing the Presbyterians, 15 to 2, and the East End A. C.'s drop the Metzgers by a 10 to 7 count.

Scotts collected only six hits against Strains' four last night, but the Scottmen made their count for three runs in the fifth and two more in the seventh inning. Lanney received credit for the shut-out.

Pauline limited the Furnaces to three hits, while the Gold Bars were collecting 11 from Cope, Furnace moundsman.

Pa (The Reverend) Mosher joined his three sons to help the Friends beat the Presbyterians in the Class B fracas last evening. The Quakers scored five runs each in the first and second innings.

The East Enders and the Metzgers battle was more closely fought, runs being scored by both sides in all but three frames.

Cubs Win 21 Of 30 Games, Threaten To Pass Pirates

BY TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Virtually unnoticed, the Chicago Cubs have moved into the thick of contention for first division honors in the National League and today have an excellent chance of beating out Pittsburgh, Brooklyn and Cincinnati for second place.

The Bruins have won 21 of their last 30 games and jumped from last to fifth place, only 2 1/2 games out of the first division and 6 1/2 behind the second place Pirates.

The Cubs have been getting good pitching and hitting at the same time. They beat Brooklyn for the third straight time yesterday, 12 to 3, as Hi Blithorn chalked up his 13th victory of the season.

The first place Cardinals, who open a three-game series with the slipping Dodgers today, dropped an 11-inning game to the Phillies, 3 to 2, when pinchhitter Jimmy Wasdell singled home Buster Adams.

Yankees Stop Tribe
In the American League, the New York Yankees made it three out of four and 21 victories in their last 31 games by again beating Cleveland, 5 to 4. Although Belted for two homers, by Jeff Heath, Ernie Bonham yielded only six hits in winning his 20th of the campaign.

Early Wynn stopped a three-game Washington losing streak by hurling a five-hitter against the Chicago White Sox to win, 4 to 1, while Dick Seibert singled home Johnny Welfat in the 11th inning to give the Philadelphia Athletics a 3 to 2 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

Elmer Riddle hung up his 14th win in pitching Cincinnati to a three-hit 2 to 0 shutout over the Boston Braves in the first game of a twin bill, but Red Barrett duplicated his performance in the nightcap for a 3-0 Boston triumph and a split.

The New York Giants blasted over seven runs in the second inning against the Pirates and added five more in the third, but still had to call on relief pitcher Ace Adams in beating Pittsburgh, 13 to 7. Adams came in in the sixth after Bill Baker hit a homer with the bases full of Pirates.

Detroit lost the first game of a doubleheader to the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 2, and was on the verge of losing the second when, with two out and none on in the ninth, pitcher Hank Ouma started a four-run uprising that led to a 5 to 2 Tiger victory.

Brown In Politics
CLEVELAND, July 31.—"Fireman" Clint Brown, 40, former Cleveland Indians pitcher is considering requests of friends that he run for mayor of nearby Westlake, his wife confirmed today.

James O. Nesbit, 60, present mayor of the village of 3,200, commented that "some of the old-time residents are anxious to defeat me and think they can do it by getting a big-name fellow like Brown."

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
NEW YORK, July 31.—The Army-Navy game will open the football season at West Point in September—and probably close it, too...

Army's Col. Biff Jones and Lieut. Commander Mal Stevens, who is organizing a team at the Big Sampson, N. Y., naval training station, are bickering for a late September game...

...the hottest bidding at the coming Lexington, Ky., horse sales likely will be for a Blenheim colt from A. B. Hancock's lot. He's half brother to Sky Larking.

Just before Luke Appling of the White Sox hit his first homer of the season against the Yanks the other day, he belted three of Jake Wade's batting practice tosses into the stands...

...in the clubhouse Luke was feeling so good about it that he offered to buy Wade a drink. "Sure," said Joke, "I've made up my mind that if you can hit the ball out of the park when I'm throwing left handed, I'll just change over and throw right handed from now on..."

Jerry Geisler, ex-chairman of the California Boxing Commission, is trying to get Promoter Joe Lynch to state either a Hank Armstrong-Slugger White or Jackie Wilson-Jake LaMotta fight in Los Angeles for the benefit of "Service Sports, Inc..."

Noodles Hahn, who pitched a no-hit game for the Reds in 1900, still works out with the team and pitches batting practice...what big eastern university (Army of course) has given its grid coach his choice of a leave of absence, a salary cut or his outright release with an adjustment in his contract?

...the official retirement of Whirlaway will be celebrated at Calumet Farm Aug. 8 with speeches by Gov. Keen Johnson, the mayor of Lexington, newsreels, radio broadcasts—and practically everything but pari-mutuels.

Tim Cohan, New York World-Telegram "Big Cox's first instructor to Freddie Fitzsimmons, his new manager, probably dealt with the proper way to hold a knuckle ball."

The first no-hit ball game at Keesler Field, Miss., hardly had been reported when Pic. Otto Riddle of Charlotte, N. C., who says he's a distant relative of the Reds' Elmer Riddle, came through with another.

It was only a five-inning affair...Marine Lieut. James E. Johnson, who broke the Big Six high hurdles record when he ran for Missouri, recently had the motor of his fighter plane cut out when he was trying to pull out of a dive 700 feet above a Jap destroyer in Rekata Bay...

when he got the motor going, Jim broke another record or two getting out of there.

Indians, In Fifth To Face Red Sox
(By Associated Press)
BOSTON, July 31.—Manager Lou Boudreau could take some of the blame today for greasing the Cleveland Indians' slide back into fifth place after their disastrous New York series which the Yankees took three to one.

With the count at two-all in the fifth inning of yesterday's series windup, Boudreau muffed Tuck Stalback's easy fly and the Yankee outfielder reached first, paving the way for two unearned runs that led to a 5 to 1 victory.

The champions collected seven hits off Jim Eaby while the Indians touched Ernie Bonham for six, half of them by Jeff Heath whose single and two homers with none aboard each time occasioned his return to regular duty after a two-week absence. It was Bagby's 10th loss against the same number of wins.

The New Yorkers opened the scoring with two runs in the third but the Indians evened things up in the fourth. Boudreau walked and went to third on Chris Hockett's double. Roy Cullenbine tied to score the Tribe's manager and Hockett raced to third, tallying later on Ken Keltner's flyball.

Another error provided the Yankees' fifth run in the sixth when Hockett failed to snag Bill Dickey's drive. The Yankee catcher went to second and scored on Bill Johnson's one-bagger.

Fish Census
The placing of the test nets in Guilford lake which is now being done under the supervision of George Messerly of Akron, fish manager of this district, and Lon W. Boring, county game warden, means that the annual census is being taken of the fish that inhabit the lake.

The nets are placed at different places in the lake and taken up each morning when a check is made of the different species of fish, and each fish is marked by the clipping of a fin and returned to the water unharmed.

A number of the fish brought up in the nets in the last few days were marked by the fish manager one year ago, so that a check could be made showing how much they had grown in the year they had escaped the fisherman's hook. Thousands of fish are brought up in the nets each day and returned to the waters of the lake.

Bucky Harris Mad
PHILADELPHIA, July 31.—Bucky Harris, deposed manager of the Phillies, returned from St. Louis today and told reporters he was "mad all the way through" when Jimmy Hagen, the club's traveling secretary, informed him he had been dismissed.

Harris said he first received the information from newspapermen when he reached St. Louis Tuesday night for a Phillies-Cards game, after a scouting trip in the south. Later, he said, Hagen confirmed the report.

Harris denied that he and Cox had ever argued.

Alaska Deer Still Perish At Hands of Timber Wolves

(By United Press)

NOME, Alaska.—The great gray timber wolves of the high North are still holding a bloody carnival among Alaska's reindeer herds.

Experienced Alaskan reindeer men agree with Army observers that unless drastic and immediate steps are taken to fully protect the once vast but now pitifully-shrunken herds the reindeer industry in the North is doomed.

Last year approximately 30,000 deer were slaughtered by the mauling packs, and it is estimated that this year around 20,000 will be destroyed in the same manner. It is believed that the loss will be lighter this year simply because there now are less deer for the wolves to attack. Some herds have vanished completely and others are badly scattered.

"The 20,000 deer we will lose this year represent 2,000,000 pounds of meat, 20,000 pairs of mukluks and 10,000 parkas," it was stated by one official who has made a study of the reindeer problem.

No Funds for Planes
Sidney J. Rood, reindeer supervisor for the Bureau of Indian Affairs, said his office did not have the money to buy airplanes or to hire hunters for a campaign against the steadily-increasing bands of wolves.

"An Army officer in Washington said the Army would be glad to send in slow planes from which to shoot wolves lurking on the flanks of the deer herds," Rood said, "and possibly because of this our appropriation was cut. But if the planes were brought in and any actual wolf-hunting done, I haven't heard about it."

Residents of Nome, appalled by the swiftness with which the reindeer are decreasing under the concentrated assaults of the wolves, said the Alaska Game Commission, which normally is charged with control of predatory animals in the territory, has not succeeded in lessening either the numbers or the activities of the wolf packs.

"The situation is a mess," said one merchant, who has resided in the Nome area for 40 years. "The government bought the deer and gave the greater part of them to the Eskimos in an attempt to establish a stable economy among the natives, but the plan has broken down."

Trees continually evaporate moisture into the air.

Three Birth Rate Peaks Are Shown

According to the Ohio State Department of Health, there have been three distinct peaks in the birth rate in Ohio in the past three-year period. The first was in July, 1941, ten months after the first Selective Service call was made. The second was in October, 1942, ten months after this country entered the war and the third was in March, 1943 following the demand for a second front in Europe.
Some 12,000 births were recorded in July, 1941, steadily dropping off until December 1941. In January 1942, births began to soar, fell again in February to about 11,000 and jumped back up again to 12,000 in March. April fluctuated back to the 11,000 figure, but after that births continued to climb until October when they reached about 13,500. The decline started again but in March 1943, it hopped up to 13,600 only to fall back to 11,000 in April.

CIVIL AIR PATROL AIDS CADET DRIVE

Ohio Organization Seeking Boys, 17 to 26, To Join Army Air Forces

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, July 31.—The Civil Air Patrol, which has won renown for anti-submarine patrol and industrial courier service, has taken over a nation-wide campaign to enlist flying cadets for the Army Air Forces.

Col. Earl F. Baskey of Fort Hayes, air officer for the Army's Fifth Service command, said today recruits between 17 and 26 years old were being sought for a 14 months training course, including five months in college, leading to commissions as second lieutenants in the U. S. Army Air Forces.

Col. Roger Valentine, adjutant of CAP's Ohio wing and secretary of the State Bureau of Aeronautics, said committees were being organized throughout Ohio to participate in the drive, and that all CAP members would have application blanks for signing enlistees. Seventeen-year-olds will receive most attention in the campaign, he added.

An air show will launch the drive in Cincinnati tomorrow and Cleveland's campaign will get under way a week from Sunday in similar fashion. A department store will decorate a show window to aid the movement in Columbus. Other cities are mapping similar programs.

Get College Training

Those signing up will enlist in the Air Corps reserve and 17-year-olds still in school at the time will be permitted to finish their current semester, after which they will be inducted as army privates.

After basic training, enlistees will receive a five-month college course in preparatory flight training, including 10 hours of dual flying instruction, then nine weeks each of pre-flight, primary, secondary and advanced training, entitling them to commissions.

Enlistees failing to complete the work will be eligible for such jobs as bombardier, navigator, radio operator and the like. Those "washed out" still will be members of the Army Air Forces and eligible for officers' candidate school leading to commissions in the ground section of the air forces.

The Civil Air Patrol was organized in Ohio by Lieut. Col. Earle Johnson of Cleveland, former state aeronautics director, and was incorporated into the Office of Civilian Defense the day before Pearl Harbor.

The flying cadet enlistment drive is CAP's first assignment since being taken over by the army as an auxiliary to the Air Forces last May.

U. S. Soldiers In Sicily Like Fresh Foods They Find There

BY HAROLD V. BOYLE
WITH THE AEF IN SICILY —
Leaves from a war correspondent's notebook:

Many American soldiers have come to prefer Sicily to North Africa because they get more fresh food, the invading troops landed with only tinned rations, but they came ashore in a land of agricultural plenty.

They can barter a few cigarettes for a supply of fresh cucumbers, tomatoes, honeydew melons, corn on the cob, eggplant, watermelons and huge almonds. Grapes are ripening fast in the hot summer sunshine and the plums and peaches are coming in. There are also some small green apples and a kind of miniature pear, very tasty, and the supply of lemons is plentiful.

"Just like back home on the farm," said one infantryman burying his dusty face in a slice of watermelon.

The people have been very generous. Troops rolling through the little mountain villages have been showered with almonds, lemons, plums and bunches of grapes. One enthusiastic tossed a whole watermelon into a passing jeep. It struck a correspondent on the shoulder, burst like a bomb, and sprayed him with juice and watermelon.

Restaurants in the larger cities are beginning to reopen. Surprisingly, there seems to be plenty of fresh meat, chiefly beef and veal.

The American soldiers don't hate Mussolini, the retired Italian empire builder, any more than do the Sicilians themselves. When the army first moved into Palermo Fred Borer, 24, from Lorain, O., was angered to see a sketch of Il Duce hanging on the wall of a building.

As a crowd in the street looked on, Borer leveled his rifle and fired three shots into the portrait. Two went through Mussolini's cheek and the third through his neck.

The crowd cheered wildly. Then Borer walked to the wall, ripped down the picture and began tearing it up. A Sicilian stepped forward grabbed a section and ripped it to pieces. The crowd cheered some more.

A number of troops new to the battle zones were helping unload supplies on landing day at Gela on the southern coast of Sicily. To protect themselves from German air raiders who were strafing and bombing the area, they dug foxholes and slit trenches between some heavy metal cylindrical objects lying in the sand. One soldier laboriously rolled one of the heavy objects on each side of his slit trench as an added protection.

Lieut. General Patton stepped ashore shortly afterward, took one look at this handiwork and asked: "Do you know what those things are?"
"No, sir," said the soldier, saluting.
"They are five hundred pound bombs," said the general, striding past.

DEATHS

The new musical comedy, "What's Buzzin' Cousin?" will be at the State Friday and Saturday with Ann Miller, Rochester and Freddy Martin and his orchestra.

Elissa Landi, Otto Kruger and Donald Woods form the romantic triangle in the action film, "Corregidor," featured at the Grand Sunday and Monday.
The story of "Salute For Three," billed at the Grand Tuesday and Wednesday, concerns the romance between a returned hero, McDonald Carey and a radio singer, Betty Rhodes, whose press agent talks her into making a play for Carey for publicity purposes.
A double feature, "Yanks Ahoy" and "Cheyenne Roundup," close the bill at the Grand Thursday, Friday and Saturday.
